Agniveer trainee from Kerala dies by suicide in Mumbai

MUMBAI : A 20-year-old woman from Kerala, an Agniveer undergoing Navy training at INS Hamla in Mumbai, died by suicide on Monday morning. Prima facie, it appears that she took the extreme step due to personal reasons, the police said. The police identified the deceased as Aparna Nair and said that she had come to Mumbai nearly two weeks ago. Nair was staying at a hostel in Malwani along with 15-20 girls, Senior Inspector Chimaji Adhav, Malwani police station, said.

An Accidental Death Report (ADR) has been recorded at the police station. According to the police, on Monday morning, Nair's roommate returned to her room at 10.30 am. Though she knocked repeatedly, Nair allegedly did not open the door. The roommate informed the others and the door was broken open. They found Nair's body and rushed her to a hospital where she was declared dead, the police added.

Adhav said that they were informed by the hospital and are investigating the incident. Sources said that the woman had been talking to her relatives over the phone prior to the incident.

Will try to adjudicate disqualification pleas within time frame given by SC: Narwekar

MUMBAI : Amid the ongoing hearing of disqualification pleas of the Shiv Sena MLAs, Speaker Rahul Narwekar Monday said that he is taking all the efforts to adjudicate the petitions within the stipulated time given by the Supreme Court.

Narwekar also said that he will ensure that principles of natural justice are followed and that rules of legislative assembly can not be violated during the process.

"I have planned to complete the hearings and adjudicate the petitions within the time frame given by the apex court. I am taking care not to affect the principles of natural justice. I will decide on the disqualification of (Shiv Sena) MLAs at an appropriate time," Narwekar told mediapersons in Sindhudurg. Setting the timeline, the Supreme Court had last month directed Narwekar to adjudicate disqualification petitions of rebel Sena MLAs by December 31.

The apex court had come down heavily on Narwekar over the delay in adjudication of the petition against Shinde-led Sena MLAs, saying the Speaker cannot defeat the orders of the top court.

Dismissing the Sena UBT MP Sanjay Raut's allegation over the "instability" of the state government, Narwekar said that the government has already achieved the magic figure of majority in the Assembly.

Narwekar also slammed Sena (UBT) MLA Aaditya Thackeray over his comments on violating anti-defection laws, stating that it is the Speaker who will decide whether there has been a violation of the anti-defection law and not Aaditya Thackeray. "The Assembly Speaker will decide whether or not there has been any violation of the anti-defection laws. Thackeray should not make any comments about it. If the violation has taken place, I will take an appropriate decision. I can assure the people of the state that I will not take any wrong decision," he told media. Meanwhile, Narwekar will resume the hearing of the disqualification from Tuesday, during which the Sena MLA Sunil Prabhu's cross examination by Chief Minister Eknath Shinde-led Sena's lawyer will continue.

The institute has asked all 5-year PhD students to shift to shared hostel rooms from their single occupancy accommodation; and all those who have completed 6 years to move out of the campus by December 10.

MUMBAI : Gaurav (name changed), a research student at the Humanities and Social Science (HSS) department at the Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) Bombay, is planning to go back to his hometown in rural Maharashtra; as the institute has asked him to vacate the hostel. Reason? He has completed six years of research.

Last week, the institute asked all five-year PhD students to shift to shared hostel rooms from their single occupancy accommodation;

all those who have completed six years of research to move out of the campus by December 10.

Gaurav is just one among the many research students who are sailing in the same boat struggling to find an affordable accommodation outside the campus. "My PhD is in social science and in its last leg where I mostly have to focus on completion of writing; I can do this back home, and can come back to submit. But for students pursuing research in engineering branches, it is impossible, because lab support is crucial to their research," he said.

The senior PhD students have already stopped getting research fellowship after five years, making it more difficult for them to survive now in the city, especially out of campus. Since Thursday, the students, holding placards, have been on a silent protest mode on the campus. After a three-day holiday, the students gathered outside the main building on the campus on Tuesday evening to resume their strike.

A researcher in electrical engineering who has completed six years, requesting anonymity, said, "there are multiple external factors in research which are beyond our control such as upgraded machinery, success of experiments, publication of research papers among all. One parameter that fits all can't be practical here."

Considering that the laboratory is essential for his experiments, this student now has to find an accommodation outside of the campus. "It is impossible for me to find affordable accommodation in Powai. Staying somewhere far in the suburbs means spending significant time and energy commuting, at a crucial junction of my research," the student pointed out. As most of these students are almost nearing the end of their research, one of them from the engineering branch, said, "Regular trend shows that a student takes an average of 6-6.5 years to complete the research. But due to Covid-19 pandemic, many students from my batch are lagging behind as we have practically lost two crucial years due to lockdown limitations."

While the administration has stated that it is only implementing the existing regulation, the students claimed that the regulation never included asking the students to move out of the campus. A researcher shared that when he took admission in 2019, the rule was that researchers will be accommodated in double occupancy hostel rooms in their first year, whereas a single occupancy room will be allotted for the next four years.

Cruise ship drug bust bribery case: Bombay HC extends Wankhede's interim protection from arrest till Jan 10

MUMBAI : The Bombay High Court on Tuesday extended interim protection from arrest until January 10 to Sameer Wankhede, the former zonal director of the Narcotics Control Bureau (NCB), in the CBI's cruise drug bust bribery case.

A division bench of Justice Prakash D Naik and Justice Nitin R Borkar was informed by advocate Kuldeep Patil that Solicitor General Tushar Mehta will appear for the central probe agency on January 10 and 11, after which the bench adjourned the hearing in the matter.

Senior advocate Aabad Ponda will begin arguments for Wankhede on January 10 and SG Mehta will respond thereafter. Wankhede had told the High Court that the Central Administrative Tribunal (CAT) recently held that NCB Deputy Director General Gyaneshwar Singh was actively involved in the Cordelia cruise drug bust probe, and could not have been part of the Special Enquiry Team (SET).

The Central Bureau of Investigation had filed a First Information Report (FIR) against Wankhede and others, based on the report of SET headed by Singh, which was formed to inquire into alleged procedural lapses by NCB officials including Wankhede.

Wankhede had told the HC the said SET sought to give a clean chit to actor Shah Rukh Khan's son Aryan Khan by "suppressing material information and evidence in violation of legal provisions".

The CBI FIR pertains to the Rs 25-crore bribe allegedly demanded by Wankhede and others from Aryan Khan and others arrested in the 2021 Cordelia drug bust case. The Bombay HC had granted interim protection to Wankhede in May this year and the same continued from time to time.

Amazon India Strengthens Inclusive Hiring; Includes People with Learning Disabilities in its Workforce

MUMBAI : Amazon India, in its continued effort to build a diverse and inclusive workforce, announces the launch of Aurora, a program designed to leverage the unique talents of individuals with learning disabilities and provide meaningful, sustained employment to them. The announcement follows successful pilot where Amazon India worked with Sol&#39;s ARC, a non-profit organization based in Mumbai that conducts vocational training for autistic and intellectual disability cohorts, in harnessing the talent of a batch of young adults in the company's delivery station in Mumbai, Delhi, Bangalore, Chennai, Hyderabad. We have over 35 associates working now at our fulfilment center, sortation center and delivery Station area. Amazon India aims to onboard many more people with learning disabilities this year.

Speaking on the launch of the program, Liju Thomas, Director - HR

Operations, Amazon India, said, "At Amazon, we are passionate about creating a diverse workforce to reflect our customer base and ensure we tap into their diverse perspectives. We strongly believe that diversity in the workplace helps create a better, more inclusive environment and we are invested to create opportunities for the underrepresented cohorts. With the introduction of Amazon's new leadership principle "Strive to be the Earth's Best Employer", we have further strengthened our efforts to build a culture that is welcoming and inclusive, enabling our employees to have a sense of belonging, value, and opportunity. 'Aurora' is yet another initiative towards creating a truly inclusive and equitable workplace for people with learning disabilities. Khushi Thakkar, an associate with learning disability, at Amazon's delivery station in Mumbai, joined Amazon's pilot program with Sol's Arc. The program has built her confidence and social skills as she shares in her own words, "I never thought that I would be a part of a workplace. At Amazon, I am learning to scan, and sort customer orders.
